Backpack – what is it?

"Backpack" is an offer

- To promote the overall development of the child
- To strengthen the participation of parents/families
- To develop and expand the educational and child-raising partnership
- To open up educational institutions in a diversity-oriented and migration-societal way

What is in the "rucksack"?

- Multilingual materials and ideas for joint parent-child activities,
- Dialogue between and instruction of the parents on many educational topics,
- Suggestions for parents in how to support their children during the educational process,
- Joy, time and space to meet up, exchange experiences and ask questions,
- Parent guides who provide the best support on site.

How does it work?

- The group of parents meets regularly at the school
- Exchange of experiences with other parents
- Improved contact with teachers
- Materials and ideas for joint activities with the child

What do I get out of it?

- Counselling and support in school matters
- Multilingual material for spending time with your child
- Developing your own language skills and those of your child
- Women power, fun and new contacts

What is the role of the school?

- Language development and cooperation with parents becomes part of the pedagogical work of the teaching staff
- A contact teacher is appointed to act as a point of contact for parents
- Regular lessons, lessons in the language of origin and parental development are interlinked
- Education is intercultural, diversity-conscious and multilingual
- Diversity-conscious school development
